

MEN WOMEN COMMUNICATE ESSAY

Free Essay: Men And Women Communicating Communication between males and females has always been somewhat complicated. Because we are arguing.

Communications styles have always been different between men and women. When it comes to public speeches and academic institutions, private discussions, and online talk we can clearly see the difference between how men and women talk and interact with other people. There are many differences between the gender roles how women and men act or how they should be when it comes to certain things. Traditionally men communicate facts directly and are less likely to discuss details that have little to do with the conversation. Men, however, hear troubles talk as a request for advice, so they respond with a solution. This statement is true because as women we are more emotional than men. Some experts propose an idea to explain this communication difference that is biological factors Cordileone, Women tend to be relationship oriented, so they look for commonalities among them that might help them in connecting with other women, but men tend to relate to the other men on one up or down basis as dominance define their social relationship. Body language in communication is one of the biggest factors. Or maybe something along the lines of women talk all-the-time and men hardly speak at all. Whether the phrase is credited to Gray or not, it does bring to light the great contrasts between men and women. Recent researches have concluded that there are remarkable differences between the two genders in the way their brains process information, language, emotion, cognition etc. These differences may affect our ability to communicate with our counterpart. Men use short direct speech, while women use indirect dialogue. It is about how members of a certain sex relate to the other. But, boys are naturally problem solvers unlike women. The reason for that is because there are dissimilar rules of communication that are distinctive to each other. Discovery through real life observation, is one way in which people can begin to understand the dimensions of social and behavioral patterns between the genders. Since childhood the communications between men and women have been different. But the real problem is how advertisements use and identify females as sex objects, dumb and weak. The only true difference is how we are perceived. They continue by stating that men use report-talk to communicate. It has been known that women use more nonverbal communication than men do. Communication is one very significant tool in the social work where teaching and developing of relations is concerned. Women do not understand that men are all about dominance and status when it comes to communication, women are all about feeling which sometimes turn men off to what they are saying. Women and men may share some similarities but, we can all agree that when it comes to the aspects of communication there is a significant difference. Women tend to build relationship which comes prior to task performance, while for men relationship will be develop over the course of work they do www. This article explains gender difference from perspective of cross-culture. When looking. The woman, on the other hand, was extremely surprised on how the man presumed that she agrees with him. Existing is the lack of productivity when the true feelings of both parties are not expressed. However, with men they keep their problems to themselves a good majority of the time and men often go to other men just seek just advice nothing more and nothing less. Nodding and direct eye contact is a sign of understanding and as women we need that in order to achieve the connection that is trying to be made during communicating. If we really sat back and truly analyze what we are doing when it comes to raising our men and women we can truly see how we are not helping but damaging. Women therefore use touch to express caring, empathy and emotions. Whether the communication is online or in person, there is a clear discrepancy between the genders. Introduction A. So, why is it that people are surprised when men and women have trouble communicating? A few of those influences include: gender, culture, and age. We live in a world rich with several cultures. Men nod their head only when he agrees. The woman also had a strong tendency to look down more often than the man. This may be because women are better interpreters of nonverbal communication. These differences may affect our ability to communicate with our counterpart.